Key Takeaways

Fiber optic splitters in Singapore are widely available from suppliers offering PLC, fused fiber, and polarization-maintaining types for PON, FTTX, and high-power applications. Types of Fiber Optic Splitters1.

PL

C (Planar Lightwave Circuit) Splitters PLC splitters are commonly used in Passive Optical Networks (PON) to distribute optical signals from a single Optical Line Terminal (OLT) to multiple Optical Network Terminals (ONTs). They are compact, reliable, and require no power. Split ratios include 1: 8, 1: 16, 1: 32, 1: 64, and dual-input variants like 2: 8, 2: 16, 2: 32, and 2: 64.

PL

C splitters are compatible with BPON, GPON, EPON, 10G EPON, and 10G GPON networks, making them ideal for FTTH deployments in Singapore. 2.

Fused Fiber and Polarization-

Maintaining Splitters Fused fiber splitters, including polarization-maintaining (PM) types, can split or combine light signals while preserving the polarization state. They are suitable for high-power applications up to 2W and are used in PM fiber interferometers, power sharing, and signal monitoring systems. Split ratios can range from 1% to 50% depending on the application.
